

INTERIOR DESIGN[®]

DECEMBER
2008

bright
bold
bubbly
Best of Year

CL3 Architects

project Bamboo Pavilion, Hong Kong & Shenzhen Bi-City Biennale of Urbanism/Architecture, Hong Kong standout In the 2,579-square-foot courtyard of a former prison, white-painted bamboo scaffolding—the unsung hero of Hong Kong construction—surrounds four existing trees, culminating in a soaring circular tower.

David Howell Design

project New York Photo Festival, Brooklyn, New York
standout The wheat-toned backdrop of interlocked panels, constructed of bamboo-plywood and a composite of sunflower-seed husks, establishes a visual through line for the 50,000-square-foot space, which is carved into five distinct pavilions and seamlessly linked by lighted pathways.

Luca Andrisani Architect

project Showtime House media room, New York standout Ten sculptural building blocks of birch plywood covered in baked high-gloss automotive finish serve as mounts for swiveling monitors in the cable network's 450-square-foot parlor to modern media.

